The effect of what is presumed to be the final decision in the Northern Securities case upon yesterday's market, even to a greater extent than its effect upon sentiment in the afternoon of Monday's session, was disappointing to the buil following. A final settlement of the case was something that the market had been awaiting with builish expectations for nearly a year, or since the Supreme Court's decision in March of last year declaring the combination to be illegal, and it had come to be confidently believed.

It would be hard to determine to what extent the Interborough strike was responsible for the condition of yesterday's stock market. The professional bear contingent made as much capital as possible of the disturbance, but there was a lot of bearish sentiment in conservative quarters wholly independent of the strike or any other outside influence. This sentiment is based upon technical and other conditions believed to exist in the The bear element showed no leadership yesterday. Its aggressions were unorganized. On moderate recoveries from time to time the market showed no spirit or activity. The pressure, on the other hand, was spasmodic and irregularly distributed. It seemed yesterday very much as if the professional speculative element had been left to interpret the Northern Securities situation for itself, and as if that element left uncertain of its ability to do so intelli-gently. There was absolutely no interpretation of it by the so called larger interests that anybody could divine from the tape. The Street is evidently somewhat bewildered. The principals on the Hill-Morgan side are away. Mr. Morgan is in Europe. Mr. Hill and George W. Perkins are likewise absent. The other side is better represented, but there was no evidence of its active presence in yesterday's stock market.

ELECTIONS AND MEETINGS.

Louisville & Nashville Railroad Co. NOTICE TO STOCKHOLDERS. this year so far of fresh speculative interest was held on the Stock Exchange yesterday. It was characterized chiefly by what traders would describe and understand as a further flattening out of the speculation. The trend of prices was reactionary, but the pressure came very largely from traders. The weakness was due rather to a lack of fresh buying than to selling of any great consequence. The best selling for weeks past has been done on advanding prices. The sellers so far have seemed disinclined to follow reactions. It has been along time since the market was put to the test of a genuine selling movement, and there begins to be some uneasiness among conservative followers of the bull side as to how it would stand one. That liquidation of stocks which brokers have been referring to stocks which brokers have been referring to the results of the company owned Missouri mining lands and there is an impression that stocks have been done quietly on strong markets. There has not been any good selling recently on weak markets. Among some of the best traders there is an impression that stocks have been well-sold on all advances for a month or more. Bear speculators who have sold stocks on the weak spots, however, have invariably lost money.

An increase of conservatiam among brokers and others is very noticeable. The present market is regarded as one that is likely to reward rather discrimination than enthusiasm, and the disdingtiminate enthusiasm, and the indiscriminate enthusiasm, and the disdingtiminate enthusiasm, and the indiscrimination than enthusiasm, and the indiscriminate enthusiasm in the bull side, as may be imagined.
